Villa in Tuscany Named in 100 Places in Italy Every Woman Should Go
Romantic villa chosen as top destination wedding spot

Bryn Mawr, PA (June 25, 2010) - Acclaimed author Susan Van Allen's new book, 100 Places in Italy Every Woman Should Go features Villa Buonvisi as the ideal spot for a destination wedding. The sixteenth century villa in Tuscany is set in the tranquil town of Lucca, among 300 acres of vineyards, orchards and olive groves.

Susan Van Allen explains, "Villa Buonvisi is among the top "I Do" villas in Tuscany. There's a fantastic frescoed bridal suite at the villa, a complimentary pre-wedding cocktail party, and it's perfectly located for day trips before the big event, such as a boat ride to the Cinque Terre."

The property can be rented through Doorways Ltd., a private firm specializing in villas in Tuscany. "We are thrilled that Villa Buonvisi was chosen as a top destination wedding spot," said Kit Burns, President of Doorways Ltd.

Kit adds, "The scenery coupled with the owner's unique level of hospitality ensures a memorable wedding abroad. Everyone becomes a family and the bride's pre-wedding anxiety vanishes when she's met everybody who'll be doing the work."

The villa in Tuscany combines old world charm with modern American comforts. Amenities include central air-conditioning, a large salt-water pool and covered al fresco dining area, washing machine, satellite TV, telephone, DVD player, and high-speed Internet access.
